A jobless graduate has sued her former college for the more than £40,000 she paid in tuition fees after she failed to find work.

Trina Thompson, 27, claims Monroe College in New York did not do enough to help her find employment.

She is seeking to recover the £42,000 she spent on getting her degree from the college in the Bronx.

Court papers showed that Miss Thompson claimed the college's career centre did not provide her with the right advice or tips on available jobs.

"They have not tried hard enough to help me," she wrote about the college in her lawsuit filed at the Bronx Supreme Court.

Her mother, Carol, said her daughter was "very angry at her situation" having "put all her faith" in her college.

"The IT career counsellor sent me about three emails saying 'oh I have this job you should apply.' That's it."

A spokesman for the university rejected the claim.

Gary Axelbank, a spokesman for Monroe College, said the lawsuit was completely without merit because the college does assist its graduates in finding employment.

汤普森小姐今年4月毕业，并获得信息技术学士学位，但一直没能找到工作。

她称曾接到过校方的三封邮件，但基本没有就业指导。

汤普森小姐说：“我需要一份全职工作，他们承诺过要帮助我，但他们并没有做到。”

“信息技术专业的就业辅导员给我发过三封邮件，里面写着‘噢，我觉得你应该投投这个职位’，就没其它的了。”校方的一位发言人反驳了这些指控。

门罗大学发言人加里·艾克瑟班克称，这桩控诉完全是无理取闹，因为学校确实在帮助毕业生实现就业。
